

NMU Online Teaching Fellows Initiative

Goal: To develop faculty expertise in the design, development, and delivery of online courses in order to build and enhance online programs.

Programs: There are two intensive programs Teaching Fellows programs. Program 1 is a foundational program. Program 2, which will be next offered from May-August 2018, produces online leaders and courses that meet Quality Matters standards.

Online Teaching Fellows Program 2

Structure

- Estimated total 100 hours to complete, in a hybrid format:
 - ◆ Approximately 34 hours synchronous
 - ◆ Approximately 66 asynchronous
- 12-15 participants in each cohort
- Two main components:
 - 1.Design and development of online course
 - 2.Quality Matters course reviews

Stipend

Successful participants will receive a $1800 stipend from the Office of Extended Learning and Community Engagement. Stipends will be paid upon successful completion of ALL program requirements, including deliverables, attendance, and participation.

Application Process

- Program 2 participants must have either completed Program 1 or been approved to waive Program 1. See web page for more information on admission requirements.
- There is an application period prior to each offering of Program 2. During that time, prospective participants complete an online application.
- Preference will be given to applicants whose courses are part of a planned or existing online program, including general education courses.

Outcomes and Deliverables

Each successful Program 2 participant will:

- Design and produce a complete, Quality Matters-reviewed (internally), online course.
- Participate as both a reviewer and a reviewee in a full internal Quality Matters review.
- Gain expertise in selecting and implementing instructional technology for online delivery.
- Share their course design and development experience with their departmental peers.
